BROWN ACCUSES JORDAN

Charges of racism rebound in House

VICTORIA (CP) — New Democratic Party members of the British Columbia legislature raised a din of protest in the house Tuesday after what they said were racist remarks aimed at Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Surrey).

Brown had just finished a speech attacking the government for cutting back on aid to developing countries, when Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) said that if Brown didn't like government policy, she could "go back to her own country."

Brown, a black, moved to Canada from Jamaica 23 years ago.

NDP members immediately erupted in criticism of Jordan, with Opposition leader Dave Barrett calling for an immediate withdrawal of the remark.

Jordan said she didn't see what was offensive about her remarks and said she would withdraw anyway, but only after repeating her original comment. Barrett shouted that Jordan's comments were "absolutely disgusting, absolutely shocking ... racism," and that she must withdraw unequivocally.

Jordan rose again and said "I am not racist, I did not mean it that way," and then withdrew.

Later, Jordan told reporters that "Mrs. Brown has a tendency to interpret anything as a racist statement" and that her oversensitivity in the area "leads to confrontation."

After her withdrawal, Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said Jordan's remark

"represents an underlying bigotry in the Social Credit party that occasionally surfaces in this house."

With that remark, Jordan rose to ask Skelly to withdraw, which he did.

Soon after, she asked Barrett to withdraw a comment she said he made while Skelly was withdrawing.

Jordan said Barrett said "even if it is so and we know that it is" in reference to Jordan being a racist. Barrett denied making the statement, but withdrew anyway.

Later, when asked by reporters if she considered Jordan a racist, Brown said "I'm convinced of it ..."

When asked if that meant she was suggesting that Jordan was a bigot too, Brown said "I'm not suggesting it, I think she's proved it herself."

FROM KITIMAT

LeBlanc starts tour of oil tanker routes

Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc left Kitimat, Tuesday aboard the fisheries patrol vessel Tanu to view the proposed Kitimat-to-Alaska oil tanker route, accompanied by Dr. Andrew Thompson, commissioner for the west coast oil port inquiry, and several senior fisheries officers.

The trip is part of a weeklong tour of the West Coast which has included a look at the proposed oil ports at Cherry Point and Port Angeles in Washington State.

LeBlanc said that although Kitimat Oil Pipeline's application to build a 750-mile pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton has been held in abeyance, he wants to familiarize himself with the north coast area in case the application is reactivated.

The company announced a month ago it planned to back Trans Mountain's application to use an existing Cherry Point-to-Edmonton pipeline to move Alaskan crude oil to the midwest United States.

LeBlanc said he would pay particular attention to channel width and depth and will consult the fisheries hydrographer throughout the 12-hour voyage to Prince Rupert.

He was to meet today in Prince Rupert with fisheries industry officials. TO TAKE PART

Meanwhile, Thompson said backers of a Northern Tier Pipeline Co. proposal, including an oil port at Port Angeles, have said they will take part in inquiry hearings.

Thompson said the expanded inquiry will examine the Kitimat and Trans Mountain applications and that the oil port proposal will not be treated any differently than if the company had not asked to have its application held in abeyance.

He said he has been assured by Kitimat representatives that they will present all witnesses as evidence to the inquiry, but they will not be doing any further studies before the hearings.

Kitimat was told it will not get a second look if it decides in six months to process the application, he said.

Thompson said he hopes formal hearings will be completed by Dec. 31 and recommendations ready by some time next spring.

For many children, learning how to carry out an important medical test can also be part of a hospitalization experience. Nine Year old Dwayne of Terrace, the freckled-face youngster above, followed the procedure to a "T" in testing his urine while a recent patient of the Children's Hospital Clinical Investigation Facility. Dwayne was one of more than 21 patients from Terrace who received treatment and care at the hospital during the past year. Almost 4,000 youngsters from 193 towns in B.C. were admitted to the wards of the hospital last year. The hospital performs many of its functions thanks to contributions made during the annual March of Dimes campaign. With four days of canvassing left in this year's campaign, organizers are making the 11th hour push for contributions. If you should be missed by canvassers, don't despair. Make out a cheque payable to the Children's Hospital March of Dimes, Care of William M. Sturby, 4723 Loen Ave., Terrace.

Speech therapist is needed

Herald Staff Writer

A letter is being drafted to provincial Health Minister Bob McClelland regarding the lack of funding available for School District 88 to employ a full-time speech therapist.

The district has been trying "for about a year" to get a therapist for the area, Nan Harrison, a school trustee, told Monday night's board meeting.

"Apparently there was funding for one last year, but they couldn't get one," said Harrison. "This year they have found one, but there isn't money to hire."

There were plans on the part of the Health Board to provide funding for a full-time therapist beginning in January of 1978, but that idea "now seems to have been scrapped," Harrison told the Herald.

"They've put the therapist on a priority position list. Well, I think this really important, and I would really like to do something about it," Harrison said.

The board heard a proposal from the Rotary Club for the construction of tennis courts on the grounds of Caledonia School, on the west side of the R.E.M. Lee Theatre.

The club has permission to go ahead with the project by the board if they choose to keep it at the Caledonia location. Skeena Junior Secondary's grounds were also suggested as a possible location, but if the Rotarians choose to build there, they will have to return to the board for permission.

The project is one of two that the club is presently considering.

OFFER MADE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A pulp industry source said Tuesday that the companies have offered pulp workers another five cents an hour in the second year of a new contract proposal.

The spokesman said the offer would bring the wage increase portion of the contract proposal into line with the industry's offer to the International Woodworkers of America, who have been offered a 70-cent-an-hour increase over two years.

The pulp workers had previously been offered 65 cents an hour over two years.

The unions were to meet company negotiators today. Pulp union contracts expire June 30.

NORTHWEST ARTS SCHOOL Register now for summer course

By JOANNE AMES
Herald Staff Writer

"We really need people to come forward and enroll at this time to complete the planning for the summer school," says Dr. Val George, registrar at Northwest Community College.

"It makes it difficult for us to plan if you leave registration to the last minute, as a lot of people are likely to do."

The problem that the summer school organizers face right now is that an idea of enrollment in courses is necessary soon. Unless there is interest shown, courses cannot be held.

"Some of the courses are all right now, but there are others that we haven't had much response on."

"We're working on a basis of trying to cover the cost of the instructor with fees (paid by participants). There are considerable other costs that will be supplied by the Northwest Regional Arts Council, the Terrace and District Arts Council, and the College."

Most of the instructors are teaching at the summer school because they are interested, not for any financial gain, according to George. Almost all are from Terrace.

He thinks instructors may be willing to change times to accommodate people if necessary.

"The response to this year will determine just how much we can expand in future years. We are hoping we can really expand this program, starting gradually with the addition of a few more out of town instructors next year."

George stressed the fact that this year's response is vital to the future of the summer school.

The interest of the community in arts programs now will tell the summer school organizers whether or not they should continue their work.

"If several of these courses are cancelled, the people who put a tremendous amount of volunteer time to organizing will be discouraged," said George.

Those who have thought about taking a course, or were planning to take one are urged to register as soon as possible. It will make the job easier and make the organizers, and probably you, feel a lot better.

Recreational dance, creative writing, quilting, drawing and painting, recreational singing, and the film series all have plenty of room left for participants.

Other courses are also still open, too.

The adult drama course is looking for people who want to take part in the production of Macbeth they are planning. You don't have to be interested in acting. It can be any aspect of theatre, which includes carpentry, lighting, sound, and makeup.

WANTS LOOK

Terrace intends to ask the Department of Municipal Affairs to help prepare a report on the advantages and disadvantages to Terrace of the district of Kitimat's proposed boundary extension.

Council adopted a recommendation Monday night that a letter be sent to the Minister of Municipal Affairs enquiring into the status of Kitimat's proposal and requesting assistance in preparing the study.

DISTRICT PURCHASES PROPERTY

New ballpark planned for Kitimat

By BRIAN GREGG
Kitimat Editor

The District of Kitimat will purchase a $45,000 parcel of land located at the north side of Alexander School for a combination baseball diamond-lacrosse box.

The purchase followed a report to council by Ben de Kleine, assistant municipal manager, who said the two sports facilities can be built on two levels.

"Quite likely, the east side, near the golf course road - Kingfisher extension, will be most easily used for the lacrosse," de Kleine told council. "The entire box would be at an elevation a few feet higher than the rock outcrop seen along the road."

No excavation would be required in this area as the rock outcrop would be under the gravel fill required. A portion of the gravel from the higher ballfield would be utilized to level the lacrosse area, de Kleine explained.

This would locate the lacrosse box and the ball field on two levels, similar to the soccer field and the school but with not as much difference in elevation.

The site can be developed this year if an expeditious decision is made, he said.

In supporting the motion, Ald. Fran Buscheri said council had discussed the purchase of the site enough to know the full facts and that the land was not getting cheaper.

Ald. Joe Banyay said he felt the location was out of the way and council should look for a better place. He said the location did not serve a centralized need for the area.

De Kleine's report, however, says a review with both council and community groups over the last several years has already indicated the Alexander School area as providing a central focus for the Whitesail-Alexander areas with year-round recreational facilities.

"Furthermore, minor league baseball representatives indicate that the Alexander School area would be most convenient for the majority of children most likely to use the facilities," said de Kleine.

The Kinsmen Club and Minor Lacrosse Association also give 100 percent support to the site for the proposed facilities.

Several years ago council approved in principle the Alexander recreation area proposal and directed the administration to make community groups aware of the concept and seek their input and participation.

It has been recognized that wherever possible, existing school facilities should be used for recreation change and washroom uses for community programs.

The school's washrooms and changerooms were designed to be available to the public even when the rest of the building is locked.

The Alexander area has been indicated in a conceptual proposal as part of a long term recreational facility and activity centre. Construction of the proposed facilities on this site would coincide with the long term objective and would therefore be a permanent solution, de Kleine says.

If work proceeds immediately on the site, the Kinsmen will have access to grants for providing the facilities. They estimate the cost of filling and site work is between $1,500 and $2,500.

Legal aid by phone available

The Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society can tell you whether or not you should see a lawyer about a problem.

"If you must see a lawyer," says Allan MacLean, "we can give you advice about what questions to ask. And to ask how much it will cost to have the lawyer do what you want done. A lot of people don't even think of asking how much it will cost."

MacLean says that most of the calls from this area, 15 to 20 of them in a week, are about family law.

Divorce, custody of children, division of property, and support payments are major concerns when there are difficulties in the family.

Many people also phone with questions and problems regarding collection of Worker's Compensation payments. In cases of criminal law, which the Assistance Society also gets phone calls on, the advice is brief.

"We usually tell them to keep quiet and get a lawyer in the area as quickly as possible," MacLean said.

"The R.C.M.P. may occasionally refer people to us. I'm not certain if they actually do or not right now."

"The biggest problem we have is distance. It's hard to refer people to agencies in the area because we're not always sure where they are, or if they're still in operation."

MacLean is referring to counselling services such as the consumer board of the Better Business Bureau, which may depend on provincial government grants to run, and so may fold when funds are discontinued.

"I've been up here before," he says, "and it's good to know the layout of the community and what is available."

Distance is a great problem for the people who live here.

"The Queen Charlotte Islands has a horrible distance problem. Their U.I.C. office is in Vancouver to appear in court. That is a long way, but every lawyer knows that you're better off appearing in person."

"Even here, in Terrace and Kitimat, the distance between offices is a difficulty."

"It's hard saying to people, maybe you have to go to Prince George, or at least Prince Rupert to see the people who can help you (in government agencies)."

advice system could take the place of the legal aid services offered to residents of the Lower Mainland by law students.

"They have legal aid offices because they have law schools down there, and the students volunteer their time."

The advantage that we have, even using the phone system to get advice, is that all the people in the Legal Assistance Society are practicing lawyers, as opposed to being law students.

If you have a problem that you think may involve the law, you can phone the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society, free of charge, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

The number is 112-800-663-3539.

RESOURCE BOARD MOVE

Vander Zalm jeered

VICTORIA (CP) — About 250 persons gathered on the steps of the British Columbia legislature Tuesday to demonstrate against the government's plans to abolish the Vancouver Resources Board.

"We are going to have to have a hell of a fight with this government in order to get something done," Bruce Eriksen, of the Downtown Eastside Residents' Association, told the cheering crowd.

But Premier Bill Bennett said, after meeting in his office with some of the protesters, that the government still plans to go ahead with the legislation to abolish the board.

The board was established by the former New Democratic Party government and is the last remaining local resource board, the rest having been previously abolished by the Social Credit government.

Under a bill introduced last week by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, the government will do away with the board and take over direct control of delivery of social services to Vancouver.

Vander Zalm was unable to meet with the protesters, because of a prior engagement in Port Alberni, his office said.

RECORD SOCKEYE RUN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Predictions that this year's sockeye run will be the biggest in 60 years appear to be coming true, the director of the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission said Tuesday.

"It's still too early to get enthusiastic," said Alex Cooper, "but it looks like the predictions we made last December are on the mark."

This year's sockeye run is expected to exceed seven million fish, he said, a million more than last year.

Cooper said the United States government has passed special fishing regulations for treaty Indians which, among other things, give them a longer season.

The commission passed an emergency order this week making clear that its regulations apply to all U.S. citizens, white and non-white.

BOATS INCREASE
Cooper said the commission is also concerned about the amount of American gear concentrated in southern waters. Gillnetters are up to 656 this year from 258 last year and purse seiners are up to 225 from 110 for the big run four years ago.

Cooper said the amount of Canadian gear is about the same as in past years.

Cooper said the early Stuart Lake run now is in the river and biologists estimate it will produce about 1.5 million fish. The Horseshoe run is expected to produce even more fish this year than the record 1.6 million in 1973.

Another 1.5 million fish are expected from the late Stuart Lake run.

Socred tampered

VICTORIA (CP) — Dave Stupich (NDP-Nanaimo) charged Tuesday that George Kerster (SC-Coquitlam) improperly tampered with a witness that was to appear before the British Columbia legislature's public accounts committee.

Stupich, rising in the legislature on a matter of privilege, said Kerster improperly persuaded B.C. Railway executive Mac Norris not to attend the meeting, scheduled for earlier Tuesday.

Stupich called for the matter to be immediately referred to the select standing committee on standing orders and private bills and for a full report to be made.

Stupich, chairman of the public accounts committee, alleged that Kerster, in his capacity as acting secretary of the committee, told Norris not to attend the meeting.

Norris's failure to appear at the meeting coincided with the absence of all 11 Social Credit members of the committee.

Stupich said Kerster told Norris not to attend the committee meeting because the Social Credit MLAs would not be able to attend and the meeting would be cancelled. The meeting, with only four NDP MLAs present, took place as scheduled.

Kerster said earlier the whole matter was a misunderstanding.

Saloon

By Joel Vanderkwaak
Grade 6

He stalked into the saloon his six-gun hung low in his gun belt, his jagged scar on his cheek throbbing from the heat outside. He smashed a silver dollar on the counter and demanded a bottle, his black eyes scanning the saloon as if searching for something, in a moment they turned back to the bar. By that time the bartender had put a bottle of whiskey on the counter along with a glass. He put the bottle to his teeth bit the cork out and spit it on the floor, then he put the bottle to his mouth and drank half of it in one swallow. Just when he put it down, a shot rang out from the balcony and he slumped to the floor dead. The End

Runaway horse

By Linda Hoeksira

Once I saw a runaway horse on Ottawa Street. He was running slowly on the road. He had a saddle on his back. I was going to catch him but when I came near him he galloped as fast as he could and I was very sad because I always wanted a horse or a reward for finding one (horse). Today is my lucky day I said to myself. I was still sad when I got home, but when I saw my dad was home he said I should have a reward. So he brought me to the police and I got a reward of a real live horse. I called it Black Beauty. And Black Beauty and I lived happily ever after.

Time machine

"Hi! I just volunteered in Prof Past-Future's famous experiment. He said if you pushed the blue button you will go back in time. And if you push the red button, you go into the future. But I don't believe him."

"Now I will push the red button. Uh! Oh! I think the time machine is going. I wish I believed the professorrrrr. SCHREECH!!!! BANG!!!!!!!"

"I think I - What on earth is this place called?"

"Rome", said a man. "Rome? Is this Rome? No. It cannot be Rome." "Well it is," said the man. "Wow! It sure has weird things. Look at these clothes! And the houses." "I think you'd better leave," said the man. "Ok." So I left.

"Now I will push the blue button. I wonder where I will go this time? SCHREECH!!!!!! BANG!!!!!!"

"Yike! Wh-wh-what's that?" "A Tyrannosaurus," said a caveman. "Yike!" "Why do you say yike?" asked he. "They're dangerous you know." "I am used to him because he is my friend you know," said he. "Well, is it okay if I pet him?" "Well, O.K.," said he. "Wow! He feels rough! But, I think I better be going. Bye! - I am sure glad I can go now. Wait till the boss hears about this!" Later. "Prof. Past Future! Prof. Past Future!" "Yes, yes, What's wrong now?" "Sir I went into the future and saw Rome. And I went back in the time of dinosaurs." "Dinosaurs?" "Yes. Dinosaurs, and a Tyrannosaurus, too!" "Wow! I never saw a dinosaur in my life! Well, come on, I want to go!" The End.

Superman

With a big S in the middle. He is stronger than any human. Faster than the six million dollar man. He gets rid of all the villains. And rescues fair maidens in distress. His pure black hair has not a speck of dandruff. His feet are super strong, even his toenails are cut.

He is so super clean, even behind his ears, maybe that's why everyone calls him Superman.

Rupert writer
blasts Herald
and KitimatBy LESLIE YATES
Prince Rupert Daily News

The three-way tug-of-war between Prince Rupert, Terrace and Kitimat for provincial and federal development dollars is an interesting verbal game, and always, sour grapes seems to have a way of inducing irrational mutterings from the losing players.

It is reasonable that Kitimat would be upset over the province's decision to initiate a mainline ferry service between the lower mainland and Prince Rupert and a feeder service from Rupert to outlying communities, excluding Kitimat for the time being.

But it is certainly unreasonable for Kitimat's mayor George Thom to say 'politics' was the root of his town's disfavor.

The decision has nothing to do with economics, he says, because Kitimat has done studies which clearly suggest Alcanville is the logical place for a northern ferry terminus. Through clever deduction, Thom concludes it must have been an ill-conceived political plot.

It is possible that Prince Rupert's NDP MLA Graham Lea has more political punch within the Social Credit party than Kitimat's Sacred MLA Cyril Shelford? Hardly. If Lea does have more influence there is something wrong with the electorate of the Terrace-Kitimat area.

So trying to analyse the situation rationally, Kitimat (and the Terrace Herald) should consider a few less self-serving points.

Off the top, Kitimat had no drastic curtailment of marine freight and passenger service as a result of the federal government's decision to drop a $4 million a year subsidy to Northland Navigation. Prince Rupert, the Queen Charlotte Islands and communities between Prince Rupert and Stewart did.

Obviously these communities, especially those on the Queen Charlottes and the Portland Canal, were subjected to an unreasonable decline in the regularity of service and an increase in tariffs by the company which attempted to replace Northland.

So it would seem senior government had an obligation to at least re-introduce a reasonable level of passenger and freight service to these communities before thinking of significant wharf development in a place which at best lost nothing in the way of service in the last year.

Kitimat's answer to such a suggestion was that a feeder service could be established from its yet-to-be built docks to the Queen Charlottes and Portland Canal communities. A serious look at any coast map would lay fog over the economics of such a move.

At least Prince Rupert has docking facilities which require no capital expenditure by the province and to boot will have a large roll-on roll-off facility installed at the $25 million Fairview wharf courtesy of the federal government. It would be reasonable for the province to take advantage of existing facilities and ones that will be completed within a year.

An argument presented by Thom and Herald concludes that since $30 million is to be spent on Highway 37, Kitimat is the logical ferry terminus because it will have a more direct link to Stewart and northern B.C. On top of that tourists wouldn't be subjected to extra miles of "avalanche ridden" highway, they say.

The facts that the last avalanche was years ago, the stretch is slowly being upgraded to civilized standards and the tourists might enjoy a little fantasy adventure along the Skeena, are beside the point. Even Thom likely wouldn't bet money on Highway 37 being open year round to Stewart within three years.

And when it comes to tourist facilities for in and outbound ferry passengers, Kitimat has little to offer, as was evident in the acceptance of a $25,000 donation from oil interests to allow it to host a municipal convention aboard a ship.

As Dr. William Hick, B.C. Ferry Corporation director, pointed out last week, Kitimat will have a role to play in ferry developments, it will simply have to be patient until past levels of service are established on the north coast.

But since patience isn't an edict, Kitimat could at least make its protest rational - as could any one of the three players who happen to lose a match.

LONDON (CP) — Britain completes its six-month turn in the presidency of the European Economic Community (EEC) this week and few European observers seem sorry to see a change.

The Guardian's EEC correspondent reports that "privately, a great many politicians in other Common Market countries look back with bitterness and disillusion to the past six months."

And The Times reports that "The British presidency has been largely barren of either significant achievement or sensation." The general charge is that the British cabinet—which includes some openly anti-

EEC ministers—ruthlessly used its chairmanship of the top EEC committees to pursue the government's own national interests, sometimes by preventing agreement completely.

Under EEC rules, the nine member countries take turns in the presidency. CONTROL SHIFTED British Foreign Secretary David Owen will pass the gavel to Belgian Foreign Minister Henri Simonet, and with it control over much of the business of the EEC's ministerial bodies.

The Guardian quotes a Danish diplomat as saying the British "leave the community in a hell of a mess." "In too many cases," said a Luxembourg official, "they simply abused their position in running EEC meetings."

And a French diplomat wryly explained: "We follow our own national interests as well, but we do not do so in such an obvious and counter-productive way as the British."

Time list of disappointments is familiar to Europeans who follow EEC affairs, with little or no agreement reached in such fields as energy, pollution control, unemployment and farm policies.

Part of the blame has been attributed to the Labor government's longstanding coolness toward EEC membership.

Anti-market Agriculture Minister John Silkin has been frequently criticized for his hostility to the EEC farm program, which rejects Britain's traditional cheap-food policy by maintaining high prices through import barriers and stockpiles of European foodstuffs.

WINS APPLAUSE But The Times reports that another anti-EEC minister, Energy Secretary Tony Benn, "has been widely applauded for his cool and non-partisan handling" of energy meetings.

Some of the disappointment with the British presidency of the council of ministers appears partly due to the uncertain place of the council itself—squeezed awkwardly between the political supremacy of the summit-level Council of Europe above it, and the EEC commission staffed by civil servants below it.

"The truth is that it does not make much difference which country holds the presidency," The Times reporter concludes.

The Council of Europe, bringing together the EEC's presidents and prime ministers, took shape only two years ago, at the suggestion of French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. It will hold its ninth meeting here this weekend.

"It now has become a regular institution, of decisive importance," says former prime minister Sir Harold Wilson.

"In a very real sense it has become the principal decision-making body of the EEC, inserting a new political dimension never contemplated by the founding fathers 20 years ago."

Writing in The Times, Sir Harold says the council, which has no legal basis in the EEC framework, now is the place where key issues are settled.

"It is not too much to say that the establishment of the European council has altered the power structure of the EEC."

An MLA's report

Shelford wants review on ferryBy CYRIL SHELFORD
MLA, Skeena

The Session has been going for two weeks now with little improvement from the repetition, and delays that plagued the Legislature for the three months prior to the Easter break.

The most important piece of Legislation to come in this period so far - is the Municipal Sharing Act which is likely the best legislation brought in by the present Social Credit Government. With improving Economic conditions this will mean a substantial increase for the Municipal and Regional District.

The improving export picture is very encouraging with exports up 17.8 percent in the first quarter of 1977, and lumber up a staggering 49.8 percent which is encouraging to offset a drop in plywood and pulp.

However, we shouldn't be over confident, as the main problem areas inflation and excessive high production costs are still serious obstacles to foreign trade and new secondary industry development.

No doubt with improved road connections to the North with the target date for paving the road from Kitwanga to the Nass - 1979 will bring massive tourist trade increases to all areas from Smithers to Prince Rupert, including Terrace and Kitimat.

We also hope to see a link though from Hazelton to the Nass, which will provide another popular tourist link and a vast recreational area at Swan Lake - for the enjoyment of our visitors and residents alike.

Many people and towns fear extra links - thinking they will be left out, but experience in other areas leave little doubt that all areas gain as the total number of tourists increases so much that no one gets left out.

All of us must push hard to get extra service for the areas - as I pointed out in a letter this week to Mr. Gallagher, Manager of the B.C. Ferries Corporation this is even more important when we don't as yet have a director on the B.C. Ferries Board.

I asked Mr. Gallagher and the Board to take a new look at Kitimat, as I'm convinced they don't as yet really understand the Northern Transportation and Development Plan for the North-West; which not only wouldn't take anything away from Prince Rupert, but would add services to that area when the twelve hour run from Port Hardy to Prince Rupert starts in 1979.

They mention also going into Kitimat on this run, but I would point out this is not the development and transportation plan for the North West, as trucks wouldn't want to go to Vancouver Island. We are simply asking for a coastal ferry and highway system to Northern British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska.

This could be called an energy saving route - where truck-trailers would be delivered half way up the Province to Kitimat, saving fuel and the cost of two drivers. Plus an extra route for the tourists which will increase by four or five times.

If we don't develop this route - then Edmonton will replace Vancouver as the supply centre of the North West and all British Columbia will loose out to Alberta.

Seal hunt opponents blocked by government

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons supported a proposal Tuesday to ban from the ice floes people who want to disrupt the annual East Coast seal hunt.

The ban is aimed only at those trying to disrupt the hunt. Journalists and other observers would still be able to witness the hunt, Newfoundland MP Bill Rompkey said in the Commons.

Rompkey and fellow Newfoundland MP Jack Marshall (PC-Humber-St. Georges-St. Barbe) made the proposal in an amendment to fisheries legislation undergoing report stage debate in the Commons. The bill still needs final approval.

The only criticism came from British Columbia MP Stu Leggett (NDP-New Westminster) who said the move could mean that "people may think we are trying to hide something that we don't need to hide."

The Rompkey-Marshall proposal could appear as an attempt to censor the hunt rather than censure those who disrupt the hunters, he said.

The fisheries legislation toughens penalties against poachers of fish and polluters of waterways where fish are found.

DISRUPT WORK Rompkey said people can't disrupt loggers, miners and fishermen who are legitimately working, "but this spring we had people disrupting the seal hunt, depriving the hunters of income."

The amendment would require all non-hunters to get permission from the fisheries minister to be on the ice. They would be required to wear badges that fishery officers could readily spot.

Earlier the Commons turned down a Leggett proposal that would have given the fisheries minister the power to close mercury-contaminated rivers to fishermen.

Leggett said the National Indian Brotherhood had asked for the amendment and it was time Ottawa showed leadership in the issue as provinces are not willing to act.

DESPITE CARTER'S OPPOSITION
Garrison approval soon

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Congress is ready to approve full funding for the Garrison diversion project, despite President Carter's recommendation that the project be reduced in scope so it does not pollute Canadian waters.

The imminent congressional action, however, is causing Canadian officials virtually no immediate concern.

The $610 million North Dakota irrigation project, in its originally planned form, would have contaminated Manitoba waters and brought parasites into Manitoba fish stocks.

That danger and protests by Manitoba spurred Canadian diplomats to take unusually sharp action last winter, delivering a formal note of protest to the United States.

But this summer, even in the face of votes by the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate appropriations committee to proceed with the project, there is no official Canadian alarm.

The basic reason is that U.S. foreign-policy commitments and court action by U.S.

environmentalists have made the congressional action academic, at least for the next year.

"Canada is fully protected at this time," one Canadian official said.

In response to the formal Canadian protest, the U.S. state department promised that there would be no work on the Longtree reservoir project most affecting Canada - until after the International Joint Commission IJC completes a study on the project and the two national governments review the study.

The study is expected to be issued in mid-August and presumably at least will partially reflect the views of IJC experts who have submitted a technical report suggesting a minimum of $49 million in modifications to protect Manitoba waters.

But even if the final IJC report does not produce modifications sufficient to protect Manitoba, Canada has a second safeguard.

In May, a lawsuit against the interior department was settled out-of-court halting most work on the project until a comprehensive new environmental impact statement can be filed.

The statement is to be complete next January and by then Congress will have to vote again on the project.

Takes Precedence

The project's defenders have argued that the executive branch may not impound funds passed by Congress, but the House of Representatives has agreed that the out-of-court settlement takes precedence over their budget appropriation.

And should Congress vote next year to proceed with the entire project, they will again have to contend with the White House.

White House policy, announced in April, is that the project is wasteful: it would irrigate 250,000 acres but would cost $1,992 for each of those acres and would also use up 220,000 acres of other productive land.

Carter accordingly proposed that only $134 million more be spent on the project, compared with the $436 million it would cost to complete it as originally planned. About $172 million already has been allocated for the project.

Technologists training in conserving energy

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Mohawk College has announced plans to start a new, three-year course in September to produce technologists in energy conservation.

The college launched the course after a survey of 100 area industries to test their attitude towards the need for such a program. Recruits will come mainly from high school for the program called the energy systems engineering technology course.

Enrolment is already under way for the course designed to train specialists to monitor all aspects of energy use and to devise methods of cutting costs to industry.

"We know that the upper levels of industry are very much aware of the need for conservation," said Adrian Tumber, chairman of Mohawk's physical sciences department who helped launch the new program. "But the urgency is not filtering down fast enough to the operating levels, except where industries are blessed with forward-looking plant engineers."

Tumber said the course will also attempt to produce technicians who will be able to give their employers a new outlook on energy uses. "Their job will be to create a new awareness, a new attitude and show the way toward new developments in alternative energy sources."

E.G. Kristufek, a member of the Tumber's department, said energy is most often regarded as part of a company's overhead.

"There is a need for someone to be able to ask why a certain amount of money is being spent on energy and whether savings can be incurred."

In determining the cost of new plants or office buildings, he said management tends to overlook added expenditures that could save money.

ALTER PRIORITIES

"Consequently such things as heat-recovery systems and provisions for optimum use of generating and distribution capacities usually get low priority even though they will be economically justified in the long term."

Kristufek said there has to be some kind of energy audit that relates to production as well.

"Somebody should be able to work out the price of energy and how it applies to the price of the product being manufactured," he said.

"That's the kind of benchmark that will be important to industry and our graduates will be trained to look for that kind of assessment."

Sports

AT TERRACE TOURNAMENT

Pitching duel predicted

Baseball fans will probably be rewarded with one of the best exhibitions of pitching ever seen in Terrace this weekend at Kerr Rotary Park as the Terrace Pony All Stars host Dawson Creek Senior Little League and Ketchikan, Alaska Reps from July 1 to 5 in exhibition baseball.

Dawson Creek will be arriving Thursday night, and will play two games against Terrace Pony on Friday, July 1 at 1:00 and 3:00 p.m.

Ketchikan Reps arrive Saturday morning, and will play two games that evening, the first against Dawson Creek at 5:00 and the second against Terrace Pony at 7:00 p.m. On Sunday, July 3, Terrace Pony will play Dawson Creek at 1:00 and then at 3:00, Dawson Creek will play Ketchikan.

Terrace Pony's first game Friday against Dawson Creek will see a confrontation between Terrace's left-handed fast-baller Jim Keller against Dawson's right-handed Charlie Banza, master of the curve ball and slider. Banza took Dawson Creek to within one victory of a British Columbia Championship a few years back as Dawson Creek placed second to Victoria, and Victoria went on to win the Canadian Championship.

Ketchikan has always played strong baseball, and fans can look forward to some of the best fundamentals from any ball club. Terrace Manager Colin Chasteau feels the Ketchikan squad will be very tough to beat, even though their players will be about a year younger than the Terrace and Dawson Creek squad.

They will throw, hit, and field well. That's what they stress in their program.

Although Dawson Creek will be leaving after their games Sunday, Ketchikan will remain in Terrace an extra two days, with two more exhibition games planned for Monday and Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. each night.

Baseball fans won't want to miss this weekend, at Kerr Rotary Park. The park is located one block off Highway 16 on the town side of the Dudley Little Bridge. Cars coming from town turn right at Canadian Propane, cars from Thornhill turn left.

In addition a little league team from Dawson Creek will visit Terrace this weekend to face the Bronco League All stars.

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders unleashed a potent offence Tuesday night, scoring 29 unanswered points in the first half on their way to a 36-20 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League exhibition game. The Riders appeared to score at will to record their first win in three exhibition starts to the delight of 17,004 home fans.

Ottawa quarterback Tom Clements displayed pinpoint accuracy with a 25-yard scoring pass to tight end Tony Gabriel in the first quarter and a nineyard pass to wide receiver Jeff Avery in the second quarter.

Ottawa's other touchdowns came from Larry Cates with a 20-yard first-quarter run from rookie fullback Mike Murphy on a nine-yard pass-and-run from Condredge Holloway in the second quarter and on a six-yard quarterback keeper by Canadian alternate Bill Robinson in the fourth quarter.

Gerry Organ added the remaining points on a single and five converts.

The Ticats, held scoreless through three quarters, caught fire under second-string quarterback Tom Shuman, who directed most of the Hamilton attack.

Shuman connected with touchdown strikes of 18 yards to rookie running back John Kinch and 20 yards to receiver Ken Clark.

Starting Hamilton quarterback Jimmy Jones hit veteran Mike Eban on a 54-yard pass-and-run play to open the fourth quarter to get the Ticats turned on.

Rookie kicker David Pegg was good on two of three convert attempts to complete Hamilton scoring.

Hamilton's exhibition record now stands at two wins and one loss.

Clements directed most of the attack for the defending Grey Cup champions while Holloway was sharp in a brief second-quarter stint, completing four of six passes for 104 yards and one touchdown.

Another Canadian, Bill Hatanaka, returned punts for the Riders, consistently piling up important yardage.

Each team has one exhibition game remaining before the regular campaign begins, Ottawa in Montreal against the Alouettes July 6.

Neilson will pilot Leafs

TORONTO (CP) — Roger Neilson never played professional hockey but his years of coaching successes have paid off in a contract to coach the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs.

"When you look at players Neilson coached in junior who are in the NHL now, you see that they're excellent technical players," Leafs captain Darryl Sittler said Tuesday after the club announced the appointment of Neilson to replace Red Kelly who was dismissed earlier this month.

"Neilson has been one of the leading candidates for the job all along," said club owner Harold Ballard. "We were very impressed with the development of our young players under his coaching last season in Dallas."

"Neilson has been a coach who has demanded discipline from his players and he's been a teacher, both professionally and in hockey. His reports on players in Dallas were the best I've ever seen."

Neilson, a 43-year-old Toronto native who spends his summers at a cottage near Peterborough, managed and coached minor hockey and baseball teams since he was a teenager.

STARTS WITH PETES

He started as coach of the Peterborough club in the Ontario Hockey Association major junior A series during the 1967-68 season and under his guidance the team never finished worse than third and once won the Ontario championship.

Some of the excellent technical players developed by Neilson at Peterborough included Bob Gainey and Doug Jarvis, now with the NHL Montreal Canadiens, and Craig Ramsay of Buffalo Sabres.

Last season, Neilson coached Dallas Black Hawks in the Central Hockey League, the farm team shared by Toronto and Chicago Black Hawks.

Neilson is a student of the game after the style of Philadelphia Flyers coach Fred Shero, whom he admires.

"Look, if we hadn't hired him, you can bet some other NHL team would have snapped him up," said Ballard who wrapped up contract talks with Neilson via a long-distance telephone call to South Africa where the new coach is on vacation.

In becoming the 13th coach in Leafs' history, Neilson breaks a tradition by not bringing to the job any pro playing experience.

Kelly, 50, who coached the club the last four years, played 20 seasons in the NHL with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto before turning to coaching with Los Angeles Kings, then Pittsburgh Penguins and later Toronto.

Ballard said one of the main reasons he didn't renew Kelly's contract was his fear that a back injury which has been bothering Kelly might result in surgery, thus leaving the club without a coach in midseason.

Kelly was offered another position in the Leafs organization but has not yet announced any decision on his future.

All eyes on B.C. gymnast

EDMONTON (CP) — Spectators at the Canadian gymnastics championships starting Thursday probably will be watching Karen Kelsall of Burnaby, B.C., in particular, but officials of the Canadian Gymnastics Federation said Monday they expect the hottest competition in the men's division.

Kelsall is virtually conceded the women's title because she is the only member of the 1976 women's Olympic team still active.

Phil Delasalle of Victoria is favored to retain his men's title, but the competition should be tougher because no retirements have been turned in.

Delasalle, 18, a world-class pommel horse star, likely will get top opposition from Owen Walstrom of Vancouver, but Masaaki Naosaki and Marc Eprecht of Toronto and Jean Choquette, Andre Vallerand and Jacques Pannetti of Montreal, top juniors last year, also are threats.

The only top male not scheduled to compete is Pierre Leclair, 24, of Montreal, who suffered an achilles tendon injury at a training camp in Yugoslavia.

ABOUT 130 ENTERED

The competition, being run partly as a warmup for the 1978 Commonwealth Games here, begins Thursday and ends Sunday with about 130 participants.

Kelsall, 14, who fascinated judges and spectators in the 1976 Olympics, will be keeping her eye on Marie-Josée Gagnier of Montreal, Elfi Schlegel, Merrie-Ellen Wilcox and Sandra Henderson of Toronto, Monica Goerman of Winnipeg and Maureen Chow of Vancouver.

"The interesting thing in the women's section is the battalion of young athletes on the way up," Sandra Hartley of Edmonton, director of the women's competition, said Monday. "Maureen Chow is one of the favorites. She's a quiet girl and you might not notice her in a crowd, but when she gets into a routine, it isn't hard to tell she's in the top class in the world."

Chow attends the National Academy of Gymnastics at Eugene, Ore.—where Kelsall also is a student—and former national team member Patti Rope of Cambridge, Ont., polished her routines. Chow is 15, a year older than Kelsall.

FEATURES

Your individual Horoscope

Frances Drake

FOR WEDNESDAY,
JUNE 29, 1977

ARIES

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 20)
Be willing to give the spotlight to others now. By taking a back seat temporarily you can eventually accelerate YOUR move forward.

TAURUS

(Apr. 21 to May 21)
Your morale should get a boost now. Some new light is shed on old problems and you find more persons responding to your efforts.

GEMINI

(May 22 to June 21)
Don't block opposition that could eventually be converted into support. Work diplomatically to bring it around. Some barriers aren't as impenetrable as they seem.

CANCER

(June 22 to July 23)
A new surge of energy should carry you far along the road to success and recognition. But keep your eye on the main objective. Don't go off on tangents.

LEO

(July 24 to Aug. 23)
A distant goal now seems to be within reach. Press on, and don't let others discourage you.

VIRGO

(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)
By investigating background information you receive, you may find a good way to improve your financial set-up. But DO investigate. Don't act impulsively.

LIBRA

(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)
Your lively imagination may be running out of bounds right now. So, in trying to launch your ideas, be sure to separate the fantastic from the feasible.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)
As with Libra, you also will have to dampen enthusiasm a bit. Excessive optimism could lead you to impractical extremes.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)
Reject the foolish notions of others. That logical mind of yours will come up with answers that are reasonable and solid.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)
Don't get wrought up over the spending habits of a partner — marital or business. With a little thought, compromise is possible.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)
This will be one of those days when you'll have to "go it alone." Cooperation is likely to be spotty or nonexistent. But you can cope.

PISCES

(Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)
You are in a mood to explore areas off the beaten path, but be careful not to waste in beyond your depth. Trends are changing.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with great versatility, a high order of intelligence and a delightful personality. Also blessed with an almost limitless compassion for others, you would make an outstanding physician, nurse or sociologist. In fact, no matter what occupation you eventually choose, its "service" angle will always be important to you, for you were born to give. You have a great appreciation for heritage and tradition; would make an excellent historian or archeologist; could also teach in these fields. Other areas suited to your talents: engineering, the law, science, painting. Traits to curb: jealousy and obstinacy. Birthdate of: Peter Paul Rubens, renowned Flemish painter; G. W. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals Y

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.
